Creating Stakeholder Value Through Human Capability

LECTURED BY

Prof. Dave Ulrich

A two-day program for CHROs and Chief People Officers on the human capability that creates value for every stakeholder.

A MESSAGE FROM PROFESSOR ULRICH

In today's fast-changing business world, managing people and organizations is a top priority for everyone involved. Employees want meaningful work and opportunities to contribute. Executives aim for strategic results. Boards care about sustainability. Customers expect alignment with their needs. Investors look for returns. And communities value companies with a strong, positive impact.

The "human" in human resources includes all of these stakeholders. By strengthening human capability — through talent, leadership, organizational culture, and HR excellence — business leaders and HR executives create value for everyone. In particular, each of these areas will be enhanced with innovative AI trends.

This program gives executives an exceptional opportunity and time to rethink all HR function and explore latest trends. It will also provide insights, tools and frameworks to do just that.

You'll have time to evaluate and design integrated people and organizational strategies using a proven human capability framework along with best AI on HR examples. We'll cover trends and best practices to address the most pressing HR challenges.

By the end, you'll walk away with clear, actionable insights to rethink your HR function and stronger skills to make a compelling case for HR-led value

I'll lead the session using real-world case studies, discussions, practical tools, and assessments—ensuring you leave with both insight and application.

Sincerely,

ABOUT
